TRUMP DROPS BANNON FROM SECURITY COUNCIL

President Donald Trump removed his chief strategist Steve Bannon from the National Security Council. Trump's overhaul of the NSC, confirmed by a White House official, also elevated General Joseph Dunford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Dan Coats, the director of National Intelligence who heads all 17 U.S. intelligence agencies. The official said the change moves the NSC "back to its core function of what it's supposed to do." It also appears to mark a victory by national security adviser H.R. McMaster, who had told some national security experts he felt he was in a battle to the death with Bannon and others on the White House staff.

AIR FORCE F-16 CRASHES NEAR WASHINGTON

A U.S. Air Force F-16 fighter plane crashed near Washington on Wednesday during a training mission, and the pilot ejected safely while suffering non-life-threatening injuries, the military said. The District of Columbia Air National Guard plane went down about 9:15 a.m. some 6 miles southwest of the capital's Joint Base Andrews while on a training flight with other National Guard aircraft, the base said in a statement on Twitter. "The pilot ejected and sustained non-life-threatening injuries," it said. The statement gave no details on the possible cause of the crash. Prince George's County Fire spokesman Mark Brady said on Twitter that the pilot was being evaluated at hospital and was in good condition. REUTERS

US DISMISSES RUSSIAN ASSERTION OF BLAME

U.S. officials dismissed Russia's assertion on Wednesday that Syrian rebels were to blame for a poison gas attack rather than President Bashar al-Assad, and signaled possible unilateral action over what Donald Trump called an "affront to humanity." The president said the attack, which killed at least 70 people, many of them children, "crossed a lot of lines," an allusion to his predecessor Barack Obama's threat to topple Assad with air strikes if he used such arms. It was not clear what, if any, action Trump would take. Western countries, including the United States, blamed Assad's armed forces for the worst chemical attack in Syria for more than four years. REUTERS

Reebok aims to 'grow' plant-based, sustainable shoes out of cotton and corn

The new line, which may eventually be completely compostable, is part of a growing trend among manufacturers to be more environmentally friendly.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
letters@metro.us

Reebok is growing shoes, and they are about ready to blossom.

The global apparel company will release a limited-edition, plant-based line of athletic shoes in the fall that will feature a sole made from industrial-grown corn, along with an organic cotton upper.

The Cotton + Corn initiative is Reebok's effort to create a more sustainable and recyclable shoe, and position itself as an environment-friendly label. Shoe manufacturers are increasingly moving in that direction.

"Everything that goes into this product are things that can be grown," said Bill McNinis, who leads Reebok's innovation department, which it calls the Future Team. That compares to petroleum and oil-based products, he said, which are "pulled from the ground, and once you use them, you can't ever use them again."

While Reebok isn't breaking new ground with cotton, it is among the first major brands to use corn to create an athletic shoe, the company said. Eventually, Reebok hopes to develop a shoe that can be composted.

"Everything that goes into this product are things that can be grown."

Bill McNinis

The company, which will move its headquarters to Boston in the fall, partnered with the manufacturing company DuPont Tate & Lyle Bio Product to come up with the corn base for the new shoe. The material, which DuPont has trademarked, is called Susterara, and was developed from field corn.

Besides cotton, companies have looked for more innovative ways to create apparel out of natural fibers and crops.

Among the most common is hemp, used in clothing and in footwear, with California-based Vans shoe and apparel company perhaps the most well-known purveyor. While hemp has its environmental benefits, it is different from other crops because farmers must first get approval from the Drug Enforcement Agency before they sow the seeds, the Guardian reported.

For Reebok, the Cotton + Corn project has been five years in the making, but the company calls it only a first step. The goal is to have a range of plant-based shoes that will be compostable. That way, shoe owners will be able to say goodbye to their beloved pair of well-worn sneakers without leaving the slightest carbon footprint.

Shoe manufacturers go green

Reebok's effort is one example of a growing trend among shoe manufacturers to consider the Earth.

Nike has its "Reuse-a-Shoe" and "Nike Grind" programs, which turn old sneakers into surfaces for running tracks, playgrounds and weight-room floors. Boston-based New Balance is part of the Sustainable Apparel Coalition, a collection of brands with a lofty vision to produce "no unnecessary environmental harm."

U.S. consumers spend about $30 billion a year on footwear, according to StatisticBrain. That leaves a big carbon footprint, from the manufacture of the products and their eventual disposal.

PROVIDED

A 2013 MIT study found that creating a pair of shoes generates about 30 pounds of carbon dioxide, equal to leaving on a 100-watt lightbulb for one week straight.

And when that shoe is worn out, Americans throw out an estimated 300 million shoes each year, with most of them ending up in landfills.

"If you stand back and look at the athletic shoe industry as a whole, neither the front end, how we make shoes, nor the back end, how shoes are disposed of, is the cleanest possible way to create or dispose of a product," said Reebok's Bill McNinis. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Shoe retailer Payless files for bankruptcy, to close 400 stores

Discount footwear retailer Payless ShoeSource said it had filed for Chapter 11 protection on Tuesday with a plan to restructure debt and immediately close 400 underperforming stores in the United States and Puerto Rico.

Privately owned Payless Inc. joins a long list of brick-and-mortar retailers to fall victim to declining mall traffic in the midst of a rise of internet shopping and rapidly changing consumer tastes.

"This is a difficult, but necessary, decision driven by the continued challenges of the retail environment, which will only intensify," Payless Chief Executive Officer W. Paul Jones said in a statement.

The Topeka, Kansas-based company listed assets in the range of $500 million to $1 billion and liabilities of $1 billion to $10 billion in a filing with U.S. Bankruptcy Court in St. Louis.

Payless, with 4,400 stores in more than 30 countries, said it had reached an agreement with two-thirds of its top lenders to cut its debt by 50 percent.

Existing lenders have agreed to provide up to $385 million in debtor-in-possession financing, allowing Payless to remain in business and pay its bills throughout the Chapter 11 process.

The company said that an $80 million new term-loan financing will allow it to emerge from Chapter 11 "well positioned for future growth and profitability post-restructuring."

Following the store closures, Payless said it will "aggressively manage" its remaining real estate lease portfolio, while looking to invest in growth areas and expand in international markets such as Latin America.

NJ Transit skewers Amtrak for derailment fallout

NJ Transit will continue to add train, bus and ferry service on Thursday, its executive director said.

AMANDA MIKELBERG
@MetroNewYork
amanda.mikelberg@metro.us

The minor train derailment at Penn Station that turned into a far-reaching transit catastrophe is entirely Amtrak's responsibility, NJ Transit argued at a news briefing Wednesday afternoon.

NJ Transit Executive Director Steven H. Santoro blistered Amtrak with a list of criticisms and demands as his company has had to accommodate the disruption by adding train, bus and ferry service until at least the end of the service day on Thursday. The most up to date service announcements can be found on the NJ Transit website and its Twitter page.

"We will take all measures to hold Amtrak accountable," Santoro said, explaining that his carrier is a tenant of Amtrak, which owns the tracks.

"In the short term, we demand that Amtrak move forward in forming a team consisting of rail experts from NJ Transit, Amtrak and LIRR to walk every inch of track at Penn Station New York, and perform an exhaustive inspection and analysis of all tracks," Santoro said.

Amtrak responded in a statement soon after Santoro's news briefing:

"We value our partnership with the commuter railroads and share the frustration these recent issues present to all of our customers. For this reason, Amtrak has requested the FRA join in a thorough review of infrastructure at Penn Station to evaluate current conditions.

"New York Penn Station is our busiest and most important station, and we take our role as host seriously and make every effort to keep it operating smoothly. We are investigating the causes of these recent derailments and will take prompt action to address them. We will continue to work with our partners at LIRR and NJ Transit to ensure that adequate work windows and funding are available to keep these heavily-used and aged assets functioning reliably as we pursue the long term goal of modernizing Penn Station infrastructure."

On Monday, an Acela Express train carrying 1,200 passengers derailed, forcing Penn Station to shut down a number of tracks for repairs, which in turn wreaked havoc on transit. Few passengers were injured.

On March 24, an Amtrak train derailed at 9 a.m. at Penn Station and collided with a NJ Transit train on a parallel track.

"Having two derailments in just over a week is unacceptable," Santoro stated, "and our customers are bearing the brunt. We have and will continue to press Amtrak on the need for corrective actions now."

Trump defends Fox News host O'Reilly as 'good person'

President Donald Trump on Wednesday defended TV anchor Bill O'Reilly after a report that the conservative commentator and his employer, 21st Century Fox, paid five women to settle claims he sexually harassed them.

"I think he's a person I know well — he is a good person," Trump said of O'Reilly in an interview with The New York Times.

The Times reported over the weekend that Fox and O'Reilly paid $13 million to five women who accused him of sexual harassment.

O'Reilly, in a statement posted on his website on Saturday, said he had been unfairly targeted because of his prominence.

"I think he shouldn't have settled; personally I think he shouldn't have settled," Trump told the Times on Wednesday. "Because you should have taken it all the way. I don't think Bill did anything wrong."

Baltimore man pleads not guilty in fatal stabbing of black man

James Jackson had told police that he traveled to New York to kill multiple black men.

A white man who police said traveled to New York City to harm black people pleaded not guilty Wednesday to a charge of murder "as a crime of terrorism" for the fatal stabbing of an African-American on a Manhattan sidewalk last month.

James Jackson, 28, turned himself in to police March 22 after authorities circulated security-camera footage of him, describing Jackson as the suspect in the killing two days earlier of 66-year-old Timothy Caughman.

Clad in a gray sweatshirt and with his arms shackled to his waist, Jackson spoke only to confirm he could not afford his own attorney and to enter his plea during his court appearance in Manhattan.

Jackson had told police, and would later tell reporters in a jailhouse interview, that he traveled to New York last month from his Baltimore home to kill multiple black men.

He said he hoped his planned killing spree in the heart of the country's media capital would deter black men from dating white women, according to police and a New York Daily News account of an interview with him.

Moments before being stabbed, Caughman had been gathering bottles and cans from garbage bins to exchange at a recycling center for small change. He managed to stagger to a nearby police station before dying.

Mayor Bill de Blasio spoke at Caughman's funeral Saturday, decrying what he called a racist murder.

Prosecutors have brought six charges against Jackson: murder as a crime of terrorism, first-degree murder, murder as a hate crime and three counts of criminal possession of a weapon.

If convicted of murder as a crime of terrorism, Jackson would face a mandatory sentence of life in prison without parole.

Jackson is due back in court May 31. His court-appointed public defender declined to comment to reporters after Wednesday's hearing. REUTERS

Judge seeks details on Giuliani role in Iran sanctions case

The former mayor represented a gold trader accused of conspiring to violate the sanctions against Iran.

A federal judge on Wednesday ordered that he be given more detail about former New York City mayor Rudolph Giuliani and another lawyer's representation of a Turkish gold trader charged with conspiring to violate U.S. sanctions against Iran.

U.S. District Judge Richard Berman in Manhattan said he needed additional information to ensure that conflicts of interest did not prevent Giuliani and former Attorney General Michael Mukasey from effectively representing Reza Zarrab, who is in U.S. custody.

Zarrab is accused of conspiring to conduct illegal transactions through U.S. banks on behalf of Iran's government.

Prosecutors said in a court filing last week that eight of the U.S. banks involved in the case were clients of Giuliani or Mukasey's law firms, and that Giuliani's firm was a registered agent of Turkey, posing potential conflicts.

Benjamin Brafman, an attorney for Zarrab, said at a court hearing on Tuesday that Giuliani and Mukasey were working on a "diplomatic solution" to the case and would not represent Zarrab in court.

Giuliani, who has advised President Donald Trump, and Mukasey traveled to Turkey in late February to meet with Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan about the case. Brafman said Tuesday that Mukasey discussed the trip in advance with Attorney General Jeff Sessions.

Zarrab, a dual national of Iran and Turkey, was previously arrested in 2013 in a Turkish corruption probe of people tied to Erdogan, then prime minister of Turkey.

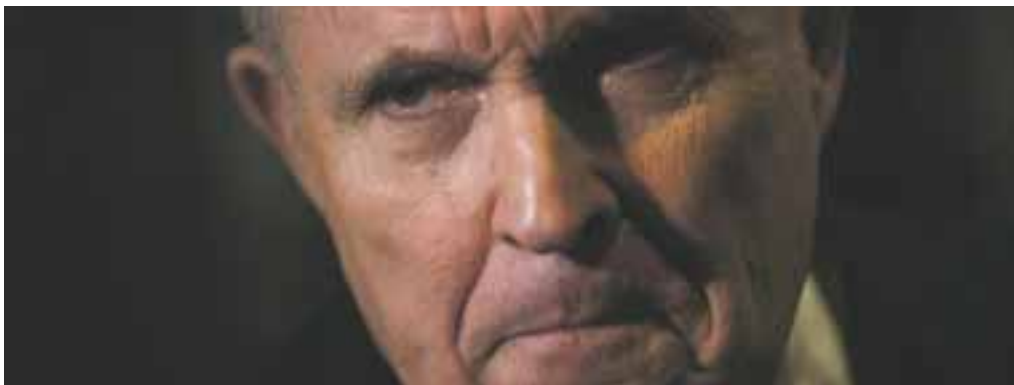

The judge ordered Brafman to meet with Giuliani and Mukasey and submit information on what kind of work they were hired to do for Zarrab, what kind of work their firms had done for the banks and what the firms were doing to avoid conflicts.

Berman ordered Brafman to say whether Zarrab's legal fees were being paid by someone else, and if so, who.

Berman also ordered Brafman to submit a description of the relationship between Giuliani's law firm and Turkey, including any involvement by Giuliani himself.

Another hearing is set for April 24.

City tourism getting boost from pact with Mexico City

New York City and Mexico City just renewed a city-to-city partnership to boost tourism between the two.

On Wednesday, NYC & Company, the official destination marketing organization of New York, and Mexico's Ministry of Tourism signed another one-year alliance to share best practices in tourism marketing and to exchange marketing assets to boost reciprocal travel.

The partnership began in 2013 between the sanctuary city and the capital of Mexico, a country from which Donald Trump infamously said "rapists" originate.

"Today, we are proud to renew our tourism partnership with Mexico City, one of the world's great cities. New York City and Mexico City share so much in common, and it's important now more than ever to reinforce our commitment and do all we can to welcome the world to both of our extraordinary destinations," said NYC & Company CEO Fred Dixon.

Baby Boomers May Avoid Knee Surgery With Modern Arthritis Treatments

Doctors say these two factors are the keys to knee arthritis treatment success and relieving pain without surgery

By Matt Edgar

America's Health Writer

New York City - Everyone has said it at one time or another. If I had only known about "this" sooner - things would be very different today.

That's what many knee arthritis pain sufferers are saying about this technology and treatment.

"We all know that countless lives are being saved every year because of early detection and better treatment" noted the clinic director at the NY Pain MD in New York City. "The same holds true for treating arthritis pain. I believe we are having so much success at NY Pain MD because of two factors: One is we are using advanced medical technology and treatments a lot of clinics do not use. And second, the word has spread to our community and so many knee arthritis sufferers are coming in sooner. And the earlier we can treat knee arthritis - the better the results. The key to trying to avoid knee replacement surgery is doing the correct treatment as soon as possibly"

What is the "correct treatment?"

"That depends," said the director. "There is no one answer when it comes to medical conditions. Knee arthritis is no different. That's why, if you have knee pain, you should have it evaluated by a doctor who deals with and treats knee pain every day," added the director.

For many knee arthritis pain sufferers the right treatment is Viscosupplementation whereby a preparation of Hyaluronic acid a gel-like FDA approved medicine is applied directly into the knee joint using Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology.

Hyaluronic acid is the natural lubricant and shock absorber of your joints and is found to be decreased in arthritis sufferers. This is similar to running your car without oil. Obviously, the sooner you put oil back in the car - the less damage will be done. That's why some doctors feel early viscosupplementation gets the best results and is so important for avoiding surgery.

The director believes one of the most important factors for the success of viscosupplementation is making sure you are getting it into the joint space precisely. That's why the doctors at NY Pain MD use advanced imaging technology to apply Precision Arthritis Targeting during every treatment.

A device called the "C-Arm" allows the doctor to see into the joint and actually watch the medicine be applied exactly where it is supposed to. Research shows that performing procedures without Precision Arthritis Targeting (P.A.T.T.) can result in missing the joint space as much as 30% of the time. If you had viscosupplementation treatments without Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology and did not get good results - this may be why.

"If you have knee arthritis pain, viscosupplementation might be the answer you are looking for. The keys are not wait, get a good evaluation from an expert and make sure precision arthritis targeting is used to make sure you have the best chance for success."

Can This Be Avoided? Total knee replacement is serious surgery requiring months of rehabilitation. Some doctors think modern treatments done early enough can keep baby boomers from going under the knife.

Normal Pain-Free Knee Joint

Everyone Wants Proof:

In the artist simulated drawings, picture #1 is a normal, pain-free knee. There is no arthritis and the knee can move and bend freely without pain.

Knee With Painful Arthritis

Pain -

Illustration shown is a knee joint with painful osteoarthritis. Arthritis causes the joint space to decrease, grinding, stiffness, decreased motion, bone spurs, swelling and a lot of pain.

Research Shows Doctors Miss The Joint Space Up To 30% Of The Time Without Advanced Imaging Failed Treatment -

The injection (Lubrication medicine) misses the joint space. Research shows this occurs up to 30% of the time without the use of the digital imaging to guide the injection. This is why lubrication medicine may not have worked for you

Lubrication Medicine Injected Directly Into Knee Joint Like "Joint Oil" using Precision Targeting Technology

Successful Treatment - Lubrication Medicine (blue) being precisely injected directly into the knee joint using digital imaging. Advance imaging allows treatments to be as precise as possible. Lubrication medicine can lubricate the joint and decrease pain.

Knee Pain Screenings Offered To Help Determine If New York Metro Area Residents Qualify For Popular Treatment

Knee pain sufferers have limited time to claim knee pain screening to see if all-natural knee arthritis treatment might work for them

If you qualify for this treatment, it might be one of the happiest days of your life.

That's because, for the past year and a half, hundreds of knee pain sufferers have flocked to NY Pain MD New York City.

That's when their specially trained-doctors added Hyalgan treatments to their already successful comprehensive knee pain relief program.

Viscosupplementation is unique because - even though it is manufactured by a pharmaceutical company, it is NOT considered a drug because it is a natural substance with an incredible story.

Why So Many Want It

You see, when you suffer with arthritis - the lubricating fluid (synovial fluid) in your knee joint dries up.

This means instead of gliding smoothly - your bones start to rub and grind against each other.

This causes a little pain in the beginning - but over time the pain steadily gets worse until it is excruciating.

Like "Joint Oil"

Viscosupplementation works so well because it is like "joint oil." It is a natural substance that contains one of the natural building blocks of the synovial fluid that lubricates your knee.

Scientists and researchers discovered this natural building block to synovial fluid in the rooster's comb - that big red thing on top of the roosters head. It is extracted from the roosters comb, purified and concentrated. They have also developed medical lubricants that are also natural but made a bit like yogurt and "cultured" into highly effective arthritis pain-fighting medical lubricants.

When introduced directly into your knee joint, it is like squirting oil on a rusty door hinge.

Viscosupplementation allows your joints to glide more smoothly eliminating a lot of the rubbing, grinding and pain.

Can Supplements Do The Same Thing?

No. Glucosamine and chondroitin and other supplements are much different. You can only get this from a doctor and it often helps knee pain sufferers who got limited or no success from glucosamine and chondroitin. Beware of unsubstantiated claims made by supplements to do what this advanced medical procedure does.

Why You Should Try This Even If You've Already Had Similar Treatments Without Results...

"We have been able to help so many knee pain sufferers - even many who have already tried other treatments like Synvisc, Supartz, Orthovisc and even Hyalgan. This is because our treating doctors always use "Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology". This allows us to place the Viscosupplementation exactly where it needs to be. Studies show doctors doing joint injections without technology can miss the joint up to 30% of the time." noted the Director of Center

NY Pain MD is a state of the art medical facility offering only the best technology.

Advanced Medical Technology Can Make All The Difference: This advanced Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology using fluoroscopic imaging allows doctors to see directly into the knee joint so treatments are precise and the FDA approved lubricating medicine actually goes EXACTLY where it is supposed to. Patients who were suffering for years with bad knee pain are getting their lives back... going for walks again and exercising. It's amazing to see. For Trump, Mar-a-Lago retreat is place to break the ice with China's Xi

President Donald Trump has told visitors that his Mar-a-Lago retreat is set up perfectly for foreign visits, but the Chinese side was initially hesitant when word came that Trump would like to meet Chinese President Xi Jinping there.

Even after seeing images of Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's backslapping sessions with Trump at Mar-a-Lago in February, Chinese officials thought the oceanfront, Spanish-style club in Palm Beach, Florida, lacked the symbolic significance of the White House itself.

"They thought, no, it has to be the White House, the symbolism of that," a senior administration official told Reuters. "They were ultimately convinced that this was worth doing. It's unusual because most foreigners realize that being invited to the president's personal place is a big deal."

Trump and Xi are to hold their first summit encounter beginning on Thursday at Mar-a-Lago, a property that original owner Marjorie Merriweather Post's estate willed to the U.S. government for use as a diplomatic and presidential retreat after her death in 1973.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Hua Chunying told reporters in Beijing that the Chinese side was fine with having the meeting there.

"President Trump, after taking office, announced that Mar-a-Lago would be the winter White House. The U.S. proposal to hold the U.S.-China heads of state meeting there, I think, represents the importance that the U.S. side places on this meeting. China

"It's a place where [Trump] feels comfortable and at home, and where he can break the ice with Xi Jinping without the formality, really, of a Washington meet-up."

A senior White House official respects the U.S. side's arrangements," she said.

No matter where the heads of state meet, "the most important thing is to develop China-U.S. relations and make contributions to both countries and the world," she said.

Topping the agenda at Mar-a-Lago will be U.S.-China trade ties and U.S. requests for China to help rein in its nuclear-armed neighbor North Korea.

Trump bought the estate in 1985 and turned it into an exclusive club, which now boasts a membership fee of $200,000 and is a haven for the tony Palm Beach set who pull up to the gate in Bentleys and Rolls-Royces.

Xi and his wife, Peng Liyuan, will join Trump and his wife, Melania, for dinner on Thursday night then Trump and Xi will have a series of meetings there on Friday. The entire visit will last less than 24 hours.

"What matters is that the two of them get together for a successful summit, even if it's on the moon," said former U.S. ambassador to China, Max Baucus.

"However, I do think that Mar-a-lago will probably help enhance conversation between the two of them. President Trump can show President Xi around, show him the digs. Trump is very proud of that, and President Xi will be interested in seeing all of that."

Past U.S. presidents have often turned to settings away from the trappings of Washington to conduct delicate diplomacy. George H.W. Bush had his seaside estate in Kennebunkport, Maine, and George W. Bush frequently played host to foreign leaders at his ranch in Crawford, Texas.

Trump's immediate predecessor, Barack Obama, used the Sunnyslands retreat in Rancho Mirage, California, as a site for an informal summit with Xi in 2013. REUTERS

Taser changes name in shift to software, police services

Taser International Inc. makes the eponymous device used by police to stun and incapacitate a person temporarily.

Taser International Inc. is changing its name to Axon as it pushes further into the software business. The Axon name comes from Taser's unit that sells police body cameras, patrol car cameras and the software for managing the hours of digital footage they generate.

In a gamble that police departments will sign up for paid software subscriptions, the company is offering free body cameras to police officers in addition to a year of free access to evidence.com, its online software for managing video and other evidence.

Taser International Inc.'s X3 stun gun GETTY IMAGES

Taser still gets the bulk of its revenue from its weapons, which use electrical current to immobilize targets. Last year, $202.6 million of its $268.2 million in revenue came from its weapons segment, mostly in the form of replacement cartridges.

Nearly a quarter of Taser's revenue now comes from the Axon segment. Software revenue for evidence.com nearly doubled to $11.7 million.

"The hardware creates an issue for police departments in a sense that you're creating hours and hours of raw data," said Steve Dyer, senior research analyst for Craig-Hallum Capital Group. "You have the question not only of how to store the data in an industry that is not traditionally tech savvy, but also how to handle digital evidence with the same safeguards as physical evidence."

Evidence.com software is sold on a subscription basis, typically five-year contracts. That means Taser has to spend money to sign up customers, while revenue follows over length of the contract.

Software companies including salesforce.com or Workday Inc. have persuaded investors to accept this revenue model. But it can cut into profits in the short term: Taser's profits dipped from $19.9 million to $17.2 million last year despite strong revenue growth. REUTERS

Facebook to use photo-matching to block repeat 'revenge porn'

Facebook is adding tools to make it easier for users to report so-called revenge porn and to automatically prevent the images from being shared again once they have been banned, the company said.

"Revenge porn" refers to the sharing of sexually explicit images on the internet, without the consent of the people depicted in the pictures, in order to extort or humiliate them. The practice disproportionately affects women, who are sometimes targeted by former partners.

Facebook has been sued in the United States and elsewhere by people who said it should have done more to prevent the practice. The company in 2015 made clear that images "shared in revenge" were forbidden, and users have long had the ability to report posts as violating the terms of service.

Beginning on Wednesday, users of the world's largest social network should see an option to report a picture as inappropriate specifically because it is a "nude photo of me," Facebook said in a statement.

The company also said it was launching an automated process to prevent the repeat sharing of banned images. Photo-matching software will keep the pictures off the core Facebook network as well as off its Instagram and Messenger services, it said.

Users who share "revenge porn" may see their accounts disabled, the company said.

Facing criticism, the company last year met representatives from more than 150 women's safety organizations and decided it needed to do more, Antigone Davis, global head of safety at Facebook, said in a phone interview.

A specially trained group of Facebook employees will provide human review of each reported image, Davis said.

The process to prevent repeat sharing requires Facebook to retain the banned pictures in a database, although the images are blurred and only a small number of employees have access to the database, the company said.

Prosecutors and lawmakers have also sought ways to prevent the spread of "revenge porn," seeking additional penalties for a practice that they said has ruined careers and families and even led to suicide.

Louis C.K. amends Trump comparison to Hitler

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Louis C.K. would like to clarify his statements about President Trump.

In March of last year, the comedian called Donald Trump an “insane bigot,” and also “Hitler.” This week, he told Stephen Colbert he has no intention of backing down from the statement — but he would like to make a little amendment.

“I guess he’s not as profound as I thought he was. I thought he was a new kind of evil,” CK said, according to Vanity Fair. “But he’s just a lying sack of s—t. It’s just simple.” True!

C.K. is known for being a comedian, but really he should be a poet. He’d win the Pulitzer! There’s something beautiful about the way he puts words together; later in the interview he calls Trump a “gross crook, dirty rotten lying sack of s—t,” and it just brings a single, perfectly formed tear to my eye.

So, yeah, Louis C.K. 2020?

Why won't Chelsea Handler leave Angelina alone?

As you may know, Chelsea Handler and Jennifer Aniston are true-blue friends. Besties, if you will. As you also may know, Chelsea Handler just says whatever she wants all the time, and sometimes it causes drama.

For example, in this interview with You Magazine, Handler is asked for her opinion on Jennifer Aniston and Angelina Jolie, because we have magically been transported back to 2005. “I don’t think Jen cares about what’s going on, and it’s crazy that people think she does. As if she’s sitting around caring about [Angelina Jolie]. I know I don’t.”

Handler, 42, knows that the best way to prove you don’t care about someone is to talk about them constantly.

That’s why she went on a rant on her show, calling Jolie a “f—king lunatic.”

It’s because she doesn’t care! I mean, when I don’t care about someone, I use a huge platform, like, say, my television show, or perhaps an interview about my upcoming projects, to talk about the thing I don’t give a flying toot about. Because I don’t care.

As always, Handler is a role model and a real mature lady.

Pepsi finally pulls tone-deaf Kendall Jenner ad

Kendall Jenner is cashing in on the very fashionable trend of resistance, and it’s going about as well as you could expect.

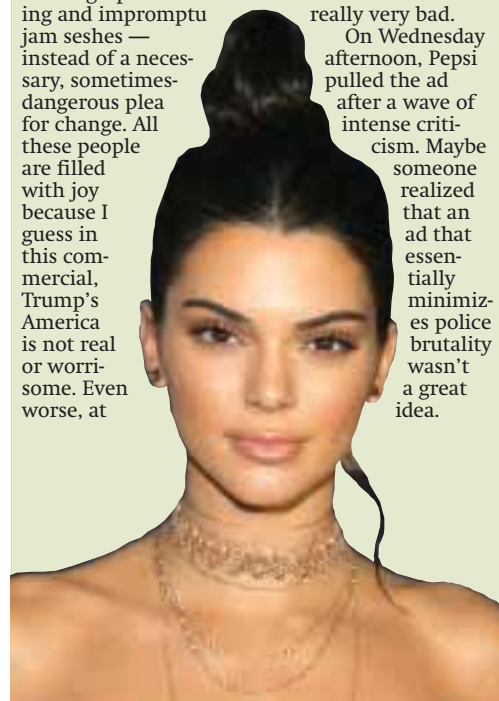

The 21-year-old — who attended Fashion Week instead of the Women’s March — has partnered with Pepsi for an ad that is as straight-up bananas as it is tone-deaf.

In the ad, Jenner decides to quit a modeling gig halfway through because there’s a protest going on and she just has to join! The protest, of course, looks more like a fun weekend activity — what with all the choreographed dancing and impromptu jam seshes — instead of a necessary, sometimes-dangerous plea for change. All these people are filled with joy because I guess in this commercial, Trump’s America is not real or worrisome. Even worse, at the end of the commercial, Jenner hands a cop a cold, gleaming can of Pepsi. Because if anything is going to bring our torn country back together, it’s a can of America’s second-favorite cola.

This is what happens when you don’t have people of color in a room to help you make decisions. The thought of Kendall Jenner as the face of some sort of anti-Trump resistance is laughable. As is Pepsi’s attempt at inclusion — it legitimately looks like it had a checklist of which different racial stereotypes they should include. It’s really very bad.

On Wednesday afternoon, Pepsi pulled the ad after a wave of intense criticism. Maybe someone realized that an ad that essentially minimizes police brutality wasn’t a great idea.

Back to the past with Christopher Lloyd

The legendary actor still got starstruck with his famous "Going in Style" co-stars.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Sometimes you find yourself in a room laboriously explaining 1990's "The Earth Day Special" to someone who was in it. That person is Christopher Lloyd. The star-studded program — one of the first earnest attempts to get American couch potatoes to really care about the environment — included a who's who of film and TV. Christopher Lloyd was one of them. He and Michael J. Fox reprised their "Back to the Future" roles, doing a little sketch that had something or other to do with saving Mother Earth.

Lloyd doesn't even remember it. Then again, who does?

We ask the legendary character actor — and staple of '80s and '90s blockbuster cinema, as well as "Taxi's"

GETTY IMAGES

Christopher Lloyd sits out the bank heist perpetrated by Michael Caine, Morgan Freeman and Alan Arkin in "Going in Style," in theaters Friday. WARNER BROS. PICTURES resident Reverend Jim Ignatowski — about the forgotten, cheesily noble 27-year-old "Earth Day Special" only because another cast member was Morgan Freeman. It's the only time the two have technically worked together — though they never shared a scene or even met — until they both appeared in "Going in Style," Zach Braff's new codger-bank-robber comedy, also starring Michael Caine and Alan Arkin. (Lloyd isn't one of the thieves. He's a fellow retiree in their Brooklyn neighborhood who mostly makes funny faces.)

That Christopher Lloyd might not remember a gig makes sense. According to the Internet Movie Database, he has more than 200 film and TV credits to his name. Some of them are huge ("Who Framed Roger Rabbit," the "Addams Family" movies, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," which was his screen debut). Some of them aren't. There's

Reeling in years

One of the strangest aspects of Lloyd's career is that he's been playing white-haired old men for over 30 years. He was only 47 when he played Doc Brown in "Back to the Future." Today he's 78 — a little older than even Doc Brown ever was — but back then it could be a shock to see him with play his own age, standing there with brunette hair, in films like "Clue," "Dennis the Menace" and John Sayles' baseball biopic "Eight Men Out."

"I once did a Q&A for 'Back to the Future,' and some little kid asks for the microphone and says, 'Mr. Lloyd, now that you're older do you miss putting on old-age makeup?'" he says. He chuckles heartily. "Great observation for a little tyke."

a lot of voice work. If he hasn't been ubiquitous like he was three decades ago, he is consistently working. The projects can all blend together.

"I've done a lot of films I haven't heard about since wrap night," Lloyd tells us. "But I don't care. I have to work."

Lloyd recalls Billy Crystal making fun of Caine during one of the Academy Award telecasts, saying he "never saw a script he didn't like."

"That's kind of my philosophy," Lloyd tells us. "Unless it's total garbage, I'll work, whatever comes along. The money might not be fabulous. But I don't mind that."

He thinks of himself as the opposite of the actor who's terribly picky. By contrast, think of Warren Beatty, who before last year's Howard Hughes film "Rules Don't Apply" didn't make a movie for 15 years.

"Some actors want to work, but they have a set of criteria that perhaps limits them," Lloyd says. "It gets worse as you get older. Although there's always grandpas to play."

Amazingly, five decades in the industry haven't made Christopher Lloyd any less prone to turn starstruck. Even Lloyd couldn't believe he was on a set with Michael Caine, Morgan Freeman and Alan Arkin.

"They're like icons to me, the three of them," he confesses. "Going in Style" also finds room for another legend: Ann Margret, who plays a feisty local fixated on Arkin's grumpy, anti-social character. "We were never working on the same day. I just met her yesterday. She's a personality."

'Midnight, Texas' will fill that 'True Blood'-sized hole

Before "True Blood" aired on HBO, I'd read all the books. I was thoroughly invested in the show. I was so invested that, when it went off the rails in the final few seasons, I still watched. I had followed Sookie and her friends for so long that I kind of felt obligated, like you do with that one friend from college. You know, the one you really liked once upon a time, but now you can't stand the way she chews. It wasn't the books. I loved those. It was the show. I mean, really, the fairies were just a mess.

That said, I'm about to take a chance on a new series inspired by the work of author Char-

"Midnight, Texas," another show based on the books of "True Blood" author Charlaine Harris, will premiere on NBC on July 25. NBC UNIVERSAL laine Harris. This time around, I haven't read the books. I got a chance to check out the pilot of "Midnight, Texas" at WonderCon this past weekend and I loved it. It reminded me of what I loved about "True Blood" when it first started. It was charming.

If you're not familiar with the premise for the show, a man named Manfred is the lead. He's a medium. Most of the time he fakes it, but he's really a conduit for the dead. His grandma even helps him out here and there. When he gets into trouble, she tells him to head for Midnight, Texas, a very, very small town full of some odd people. We're talking vampires, witches and even angels. (Well, one guy has wings and protects the town, so I'm guessing that's what he is.)

Sounds like "True Blood," right? Well, first of all, it's on network TV, so there'll definitely be less violence and nudity. The thing that's different here is the charm. This show doesn't seem to be taking itself too seriously, where "True Blood" definitely did a lot of the time. This one has a talking cat. OK, I'm not sold on that part yet, but I'm willing to give it a shot. The stakes seem high, but the actors seem to be having fun. It doesn't feel ... heavy. I think I'm right at the point where that sounds absolutely lovely. I bet I'm not the only one.

I think the thing that struck me about "True

Blood" was that it was about a bunch of outsiders who wouldn't fit in anywhere else, and the few humans who are totally cool with that. I like the idea of a place where no one gets judged for who they are. We'll see how it plays out when it premieres this summer, but for right now, I'm totally in. Bring on the weirdos!

Eat, drink and art at Pancakes & Booze NYC. ALL PHOTOS TOM KIRLIN/PANCAKES & BOOZE

Pancakes & Booze features free flapjacks, local talent

The traveling art-and-carb fest hits Tribeca's M1-5 Lounge.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

For Pancakes & Booze founder Tom Kirlin, combining free flapjacks, alcohol and art has been a recipe for success.

The L.A. resident first devised his art-and-carb fest back in 2009 as a side project, a way for the former film and TV cameraman to make use of his studio space that would sit empty on nights he wasn't working. He started out booking his friends and artists who responded to open calls.

But the low-key vibe of the art shows, combined with the pancakes and libations — basically, the antithesis of the stuffy wine-and-cheese gallery shtick — made the event stick. Now the 38-year-old has parlayed P&B into a full-time gig, hosting it in more than 30 cities nationwide over the past eight years. The traveling show closes out its New York City tenure tonight at Tribeca's M1-5 Lounge.

Why pancakes and booze?

"When I started curating art shows, I wanted to be able to give people an incentive to come," says Kirlin. "I grew up in Tucson, Arizona, and the only place to go after a night of drinking was IHOP. I always wished IHOP would serve alcohol." His first idea was to open a restaurant called Pancakes and Booze, but then repurposed it to create the shows.

For each city's rendition, Kirlin sets out to showcase local talent, with an emphasis on less-established artists — recent grads and the like.

"There's not a lot of places where young, emerging artists can showcase their work in a fun atmosphere," he explains.

The showcase will feature nearly 500 works across mediums, from sculpture to paintings to photography, from over 150 mostly New York City-based artists.

Beyond the free pancakes, flipped to order, the night will also feature live body painting and DJ sets.

All art is for sale, with 100 percent of profits going to the artists; prices start as low as $50.

See some damn fine art at this David Lynch tribute show

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

Besides a David Lynch retro at IFC, "Twin Peaks" trivia at Videology and good old-fashioned binge-watching at home, here's another way to get your mind right — or rather, properly addled — before the "Twin Peaks" revival in May: a David Lynch tribute art show.

"In Dreams" opens Saturday at the Spoke Art Gallery on the Lower East Side, featuring Lynch-inspired works by over 80 international artists.

The San Francisco-based contemporary art gallery, which only recently opened its New York City location, is known for curating pop-culture themed tributes. Past shows have included odes to Wes Anderson, Martin Scorsese and a Quentin Tarantino vs. Coen brothers mashup.

Spoke NYC gallery director Jessica Ross tells us the gallery first hosted a David Lynch tribute show back in 2014. But when they learned of the upcoming "Twin Peaks" revival, they thought it'd be perfect timing to put on a second installment at the New York City location, she says.

For the show, the curators hand-selected the contributing artists, but gave them full freedom to create inspirations based on anything from Lynch's oeuvre. Many nod to "Twin Peaks," like L.A.-

based artist Matt Skiff's graphic comic-style rendering of the creepy mirror shot of Special Agent Dale Cooper from the Season 2 finale, or Brooklyn-based artist Justin Hager's Renaissance painting of Laura Palmer's plastic-wrapped corpse being carried out as Leland, Bob, Cooper and more look on in anguish.

You'll also see an alternate "Mulholland Dr." movie poster of an L.A. diner in dusky blues and pink from graphic designer George Townley, or surrealist Allison Reimold's "Blue Velvet" homage intertwining Laura Dern's and Isabella Rossellini's faces in an eerie yin and yang.

While the show runs through April 30, opening night on Saturday has plenty of perks: free beer from Bronx Brewery, "Twin Peaks" postcards and "I Heart Dale Cooper" and "Welcome to Twin Peaks" pins from Etsy, and a raffle giveaway to select screenings from Roxy Cinema's upcoming Lynch retro, with the first hundred guests receiving free tickets to the Roxy's May 1 showing of "Twin Peaks: Fire Walk with Me."

Possibly the best part: a Black Lodge photo booth, which will recreate the red room from scratch. Ross says she ordered flooring she'll paint a chevron pattern

Step through Gulliver's Gate

Somehow, Times Square doesn't look any less chaotic even when standing still. ALL PHOTOS EVA KIS

It's not all famous sites — plenty of tiny people are just going about daily life.

A miniature model of the real world's greatest hits comes to Times Square.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

A miniature version of our world is coming to the Crossroads of the World.

Named for Jonathan Swift's adventurer who washes up in the tiny kingdom of Lilliput, Gulliver's Gate is like a model train set taken to the next five levels. The 87th-scale exhibit spans 300 scenes of famous manmade landmarks — the Taj Mahal, Times Square, St. Basil's in Moscow — to natural wonders, from the bucolic New England countryside to the Philippines' rice terraces. New York gets an entire room to itself — just don't make too much of the Guggenheim being around the corner from the Chrysler Building, as the exhibit takes a bit of artistic license.

"Creating beautiful models and landscapes that have always interested me as child," says Michael Langer, co-founder and vice president of development at Gulliver's Gate. Alas, "I always had better vision than dexterity. What better way to fulfill the dream of having the biggest toy in the world than working with the best artists from around the globe to help bring my vision to life?"

For a tiny world, Gulliver's Gate spans a massive 50,000 square feet. It not only condenses the highlights of our modern world but weaves in right where it stood centuries ago.

"With the fluidity of time and space, we can be ever-changing and always relevant," Langer explains. Expect the exhibit to keep changing, adding new scenes that look to the past, incorporate new marvels, and even speculate on the possible future, like a Martian space station.

This isn't just a fancy diorama though. Look closer, and you'll see surprising details everywhere. There are zombies chasing tourists in Egypt, a protest in Israel, and police surrounding a suspicious package on a subway platform beneath Grand Central. The exhibition isn't the past, like the Lenape Indian settlement on the banks of the East River near the Brooklyn Bridge, afraid to get real.

"Gulliver's Gate is the realization of a vision by over 600 artists and craftspeople from around the world," says Langer. "The model makers were tasked to create a world that best represents how they see the region they are from. They were also given a fair amount of latitude to impart their own personality and humor into the exhibit."

Trains won't be the only moving parts. There's a working airport, cars that will move on magnetized tracks, skiers will come down the slopes of formerly Olympic host city Sochi and more. Guests who spring for an RFID key can use it to activate scenes like the Loch Ness Monster emerging from its lake and Zeus raining down thunder and lightning from Mount Gulliver's Gate also ties back to the real world, with visitors able to step inside the control room that monitors the whole exhibit and talk to the "conductors," as well as watch new models be created in two active workshops. And if you're so enchanted that you never want to leave, a 3-D figurine can be made of you and inserted into your choice of scenes.

Herb Karlitz has known Harlem star chef Marcus Samuelsson for over 20 years. So he didn't actually have to say what they were both thinking at a 2014 South Beach Food & Wine Festival afterparty.

"We basically thought it up at the exact same time," he says of Harlem EatUp!, the weeklong festival of the neighborhood's unique food and culture that returns May 15. "It's about celebrating what's made Harlem, like Sylvia's, and that today there are Michelin-starred restaurants, plus music and art."

Tickets are on sale now for events from chef dinners that pair some of the biggest names in the food world, like Daniel Boulud, with the chefs of local restaurants, two days of walk-around tastings and seminars, and, as always, an outdoor festival that's free to attend with food, live music and more.

We asked Karlitz where he likes to go when he's not busy scoping out the latest and greatest in Harlem.

Hidden gem

Savour Sichuan, I would put that place against almost anywhere in the city. I took two Michelin chefs there for dinner six months ago, and who walks in? Bernie Sanders, with 10 Secret Service agents. I asked him how he heard about it, and he said, "Somebody on my team told me it was really good and off the beaten path." 108 W. 39th St., Midtown West

Catch up with friends

I'm not going to say it's the best pizza in the world, but Lazzara's Pizza is fun and funky. You go up the staircase and it looks like you're entering an abandoned tenement. It's a square-pizza place with a little bar, and it's always packed. 221 W. 38th St., Midtown West

New classics

Floyd Cardoz, I'm so happy he's got a hit downtown with his place Paowalla. I love Indian breads, tandoor breads, it's an amazing place. And even though I try not to just go for the latest and greatest, Daniel Rose has a hit on his hands with Le Coucou. It's really good, fun and different. 109 Spring St., South Village; 138 Lafayette St., SoHo

Out-of-town guests

You want to see something old New York? We'll sit at the Grand Central Oyster Bar. And there's Nom Wah Tea Parlor in Chinatown. I'm so glad those guys took that to the next level, but they kept the original tea parlor that's 100 years old. 89 E. 42nd St.; 13-15 Doyers St., Chinatown

Date night

Le Zie is Bohemian, it's fun because it's in the back of a Japanese butcher chop, but it's a wine bar. That's where I told my son — late teenager, he's got a new girlfriend but not a lot of money — to go and see if he can get a table in the back room. It's just good value for great Italian food. 172 Seventh Ave., Chelsea

Late night

I had an event recently with Gloria and Emilio Estefan, and afterward we took them right across the street to Junior's for cheesecake and chocolate egg creams. Brooklyn Steel is your new place to rock

We could use more versatile concert venues outside of Manhattan, and there's reason to be hopeful about Brooklyn Steel, the latest project from Bowery Presents.

When the concert hall opens at 319 Frost St. on April 6, it will be the largest general admission venue in the borough with a capacity of 1,800. Bowery Presents, which also runs venues ranging from Hell's Kitchen's cavernous Terminal 5 to the intimate Mercury Lounge, kept many decorative nods to the building's past as a steel factory while striving to create a user-friendly venue.

The main concert area has a raised platform in the back for better sightlines and a spacious mezzanine for those who don't need to get sweated on. Three bars cater to concert-goers, with the related all-important bathroom situation kept in check with 40 stalls.

Sound will be provided by L-Acoustics, who have worked with acts like David Guetta, Adele and Maroon 5, while the noise situation will be kept under control with a rooftop garden (no word yet on whether it will ever be accessible to concert-goers).

This is looking to be the new place to catch popular alternative acts, with Animal Collective, Father John Misty and Goldfrapp among the upcoming shows. Get tickets at bowerypresent.com.

Experience Cuba without a passport

Much of Ybor City remains a throwback to the origins of Tampa. KEIR MAGOULAS

Tabanero Cigars VISIT TAMPA

Explore Tampa's rich culture and heritage, including a surprising tie to the Caribbean country.

ED CONDRAN
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Florida is a relatively young state, but what it lacks in old buildings it makes up for with plenty of cultural history. You'll find plenty of cigars and even a slice of Havana in Tampa, particularly in vibrant Ybor City.

Have a cigar

We knew we were in the right place at the first whiff of the aromas emanating from Tabanero Cigars.

Ybor City in downtown Tampa is known as the cigar capital of the world, with a number of old-school shops where stogies are hand-crafted. Our favorite is Tabanero Cigars, which offers an array of quality smokes. Located in the heart of Ybor on Seventh Avenue, the microfactory (just six rollers at the front of the shop turn out its stock) is renowned for the quality of its tobacco and the skill of its artisans. We enjoyed the Maceda Press, a rich cohiba, which is potent but not overpowering. There's nothing like sitting on a couch with your feet up while puffing away indoors.

Experience old-timey Tampa

After finishing off our stogies, we wanted to learn more about cigars, so we trekked to the Tampa Bay History Center, which features a reproduction of a 1920s cigar store.

Details of the rise, fall and re-emergence of the cigar and Tampa are covered, along with a sprawling 12,000 years of Florida history. As much as we love cigars, the section of the museum chronicling the Spanish conquistadors is the most fascinating and worth the visit. Much like the rest of Tampa, the History Center is expanding: An $11 million addition will open by autumn, with a promising first exhibit called "Treasure Seekers: Conquistadors, Pirates and Shipwrecks."

See the original Magic Kingdom

Well before Disney World, there was the Tampa Bay Hotel. The first building to be electrified in the Sunshine state attracted the elite, who vacationed in opulence at the turn of the 20th century.

The hotel, which had an indoor pool, a casino and a racetrack, among many other amenities, closed during the Great Depression. However, you can see what life was like at the hotel, which is a U.S.

National Historic Landmark, by visiting the Henry B. Plant Museum that's now housed in the same building. It's worth checking out the site, which is now part of the University of Tampa, just to eyeball the artifacts (luxurious furniture and revealing photos) and the striking Moorish Revival architecture.

An offer you can't refuse

Walk right into mob history on one of author Scott Deitch's Mafia Tours of Ybor City. See where George "Saturday" Zarate and Charlie

Williams were gunned down, learn where the made men hung out and see more evidence of an underworld as dangerous and colorful as Chicago's. Deitch's 90-minute tour is inspired by the book and film "Live By Night," which Ben Affleck directed in Tampa.

Visit Cuba without leaving the country

In 1951, a Cuban couple decided to donate their Ybor City property to the state of Cuba as a memorial to the poet and revolutionary Jose Marti. Newly free and independent Cuba accepted, and Tampa has a small patch of Cuban land, a serene and well-maintained plot open to the public. Marti, a provocative 19th-century philosopher, would be pleased that so many picnic in his bucolic park.

Budget-conscious spring travelers, your answer is our glorious national parks.

Fodor's

Once spring has sprung, it's time to get out and enjoy the great outdoors. And what better way to experience nature than in some of our magnificent national parks? This year, plan a trip for April 15-16 or 22-23, when entry fees are waived in honor of National Park Week.

Yosemite

Spring comes quickly at Yosemite National Park, with the melting snow fueling peak waterfall season. By April, even the smallest creeks gush with water, and the park's iconic waterfalls flow at full throttle. Mirror Lake fills to the brim, offering a stunning reflection of Half Dome that can't be seen during drier times of the year. Visit in late April or early May to catch the eruption of dogwood blossoms, which some would argue rival even the waterfalls.

Kenai Fjords

Located on the edge of the Kenai Peninsula, the ice fields, icebergs and glaciers of Kenai Fjords National Park are spectacular in any season. But the park is perhaps the most awe-inspiring in the spring when gray whales return to Alaska to feed, and millions of birds begin their annual journey to the rookeries of the rocky coasts.

Great Smoky Mountains

With 1,500 types of flowering plants, more than any other North American park, Great Smoky Mountains National Park in Tennessee and North Carolina is often referred to as Wildflower

Joshua Tree National Park

GETTY IMAGES

National Park. The milder temperatures and reduced haze in spring make for ideal visiting conditions.

Joshua Tree

Head to California for the unique sight of desert flowers in the spring. While Joshua Tree National Park's namesake greenery is mesmerizing in its own right, the oco-tillo, or vine cactus, steals the show. With enough spring rain, the tall, spindly plant bursts into unexpected crimson flowers. Springtime visitors also appreciate the more humane temperatures, ideal for rock climbing and bouldering, along with crisp, campfire-worthy evenings.

Zion

Easily one of the most dramatically beautiful landscapes on the planet, Zion National Park's cooler spring temperatures make for more pleasurable hiking along its many exposed (read: scorching hot) trails. Spring visitors to this Utah park enjoy fewer crowds, spectacular high-volume waterfalls courtesy of the snow melt and rare glimpses of green contrasting against the sun-drenched orange rock.

Death Valley

The hottest place on Earth in summer (up to 120 degrees), California's Death Valley National Park in the spring provides a warm and welcome reprieve from winter's chill. The scenery borders on otherworldly, with vast sand dunes and towering peaks. Spring break and Easter can get crowded, but seeing blankets of wildflower blooms in this stark landscape is worth it.

Arches

With the highest density of natural stone arches in the world (more than 2,000 of them), driving through Arches National Park in Utah is a surreal experience. In March, and even early April, you're likely to have it to yourself. Temperatures are a mild 60 degrees, and the La Sal Mountains are still snow-capped, which makes for startling photos of the orange sandstone arches and clear blue sky.

KNICKS MUST TRANSITION TO THE YOUNG STARS

The NBA season is winding down and for the Knicks, well, it's been over for a while now.

Coming into this season, some touted the Knicks as a "superteam" with two former All-Stars, Derrick Rose and Joakim Noah, teaming up with Carmelo Anthony and Kristaps Porzingis. Now with only four games remaining in the season, the Knicks are looking at the NBA draft lottery once again instead of the playoffs.

It has been a bumpy road from the get-go for first-year coach Jeff Hornacek, as he tried to add an aspect of Phil Jackson's triangle offense to his high-pace style.

It's fair to say that the Knicks as a team did not buy into it and it showed night in and night out.

Hornacek can only be blamed for so much of the Knicks' woes as he is not out there playing. But he can be held accountable for the lack of continuity with the team.

You could see there was a rift between the veterans and the younger players on the bench. There were plenty of instances during the season when the younger bench players would outshine the vets and it was clear that it did not sit well with the older guys. Those types of relationships tear teams apart and that is what we have now.

The Knicks have a plethora of young players who showed that they are willing to buy into what Hornacek and Jackson are selling.

The likes of and Porzingis, Willy Hernangomez, Ron Baker and Mindaugas Kuzminskas

all showed willingness to share the ball and play together as one cohesive unit.

The veterans, on the other hand, seemed to be focused more on themselves.

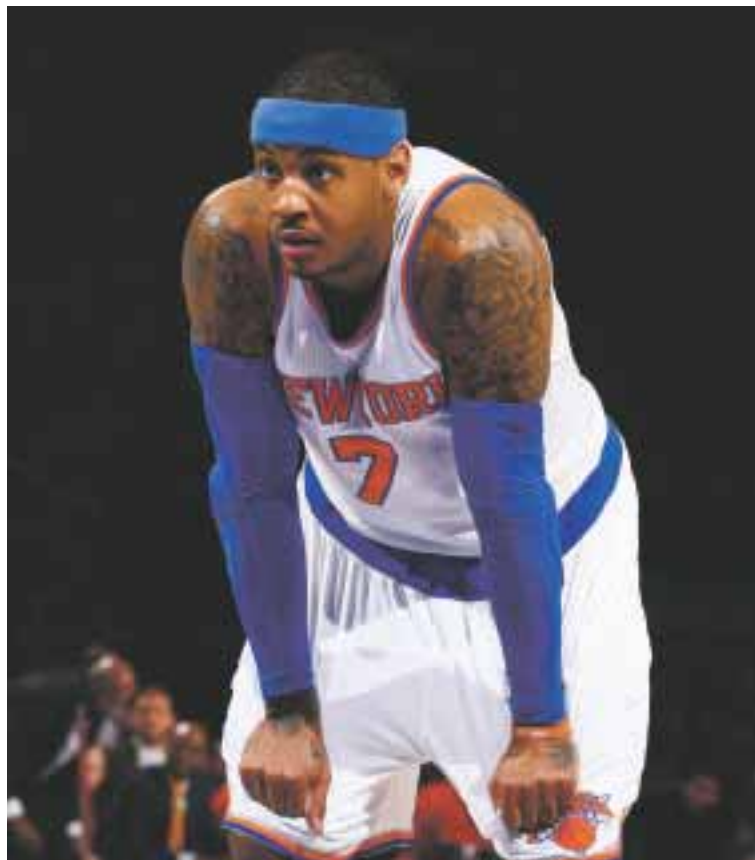

A visible lack of fluidity began to show among them on the floor, especially when guys came in off the bench. It seemed as though the vets did not trust the younger guys, and sadly it looked like they did not want them to succeed.

That may not be the case, but subconsciously it might have been. Regardless, it leaked through to the fans and media, which is a recipe for disaster.

So what's next for the Knicks? Carmelo Anthony has overstayed his welcome in New York. It may be time for him to waive that no trade clause and move on from the organization.

It is now more than apparent that a team cannot be built around Anthony as the centerpiece. He is not a leader despite being one of the greatest scorers of his time at his position.

Melo has failed to reach his ceiling as a

Given their lack of success, it might be time for the Knicks to part ways with Carmelo Anthony. GETTY IMAGES complete basketball player and wherever he goes next, I think he needs play in a less-central role.

Other than Anthony, the Knicks are going to have to ride out Joakim Noah's huge deal for the next three seasons and there is no chance that anyone will want to trade for his bum ass.

The Knicks won't have to wait that long to see the departure of Derrick Rose, who will be a free agent and likely end up with the team that offers him the most money.

Porzingis and Hernangomez have given hope to Knicks fans for a brighter future and will hopefully call Madison Square Garden home for a long time. Those are the two guys the Knicks need to build around going forward.

Having a perennial All-Star might look nice on paper, but when the wins don't show up, it is time to take a good hard look at making some changes. There have been far more lows than highs during Melo's tenure in New York and I think it's time for him to move on.

2017 NFL Mock Draft: Predicting Giants, Jets 1st-round picks

It's crunch time with the 2017 NFL Draft just three weeks away. With the Jets holding the No. 6 overall pick in the first round and the Giants at No. 23, both teams may be looking to upgrade the offense on April 27.

Jets: Mitchell Trubisky, QB, North Carolina
The Jets need a franchise quarterback.

Bryce Petty (six games) and Christian Hackenberg (none) have not put together a large enough body of work at the NFL level to be considered that yet.

Their new signing, 37-year-old Josh McCown, is not a solution either.

The organization has been high on Trubisky, who dazzled in his short stint as starting quarterback at North Carolina.

In just 13 games during his junior season in 2016, he completed 18 percent of his passes for 3,748 yards, 30 touchdowns and just six interceptions.

At 6-foot-3, he has an efficient, big arm and has shown the ability to succeed in a pro-style offense as a traditional drop-back passer.

Alabama tight end O.J. Howard has also been thought to be an option with the sixth selection, but no good will come from drafting a pass catcher if there isn't a competent quarterback to deliver him the ball.

Giants: Garrett Bolles, OT, Utah

Big Blue has been trying to find a big stopper on the edge of its offensive line for the past few years now.

The Tennessee Titans pulled the rug out from under the Giants last year when they hopped over them to draft offensive tackle Jack Conklin.

New York also went after Russell Okung in free agency this winter, but lost out to the Los Angeles Chargers.

Ereck Flowers has been a liability at the left tackle position while Bobby Hart was nothing to write home about on the right side. In fact, Pro Football Focus ranked the two as the worst offensive tackle combination in all of football.

Bolles is very athletic for a 6-foot-5, 297-pound prospect and possesses superior footwork to ensure that he is always in a good position to cut off edge rushers.

He can move quickly from side to side, is able to advance his blocking up the field and can provide a quick, solid fix at the position. JOE PANTORNO

Aries Taking business trips, giving interviews and learning skills will help you set a course for success. If you honor a promise, you will gain an ally.

Taurus Don't take someone's challenge of you the wrong way. Size up the situation before you commit to any competitive act that could lead to an injury. Stand up for yourself.

Gemini Consider making a change to your current work environment. An opportunity will arise, but before you accept, make sure you can afford the underlying cost.

Cancer Stay focused when it comes to work and taking care of business. Refuse to let anyone dump his or her responsibilities on you. Let your anger spur you to work harder.

Leo Don't let your personal life interfere with your job. If you have taken on too much, you must step up and work hard to get things done on time.

Virgo A change in your personal finances is apparent. Be careful how you deal with tax matters and people trying to take advantage of you. Focus on personal gains.

Libra You'll attract interesting people. Be careful what you get drawn into. Change can be good, but not if you can't afford it. Temptation will drag you down.

Scorpio The choices you have will excite you, but will probably leave friends or loved ones worried about the outcome. Reassurance will help you gain support.

Sagittarius If you change your lifestyle, it will give you the freedom you need to follow your heart and dreams. Don't give in to someone trying to control your life.

Capricorn Home is your sanctuary, and whether you make a residential move or alter your current living situation, you stand to prosper. Listen to your heart.

Aquarius Paying down personal bills will get you back on track. Money will come from an unexpected source, but you will end up being responsible for the paperwork involved.

Pisces It will be difficult to keep up with all the changes going on. Take a step back and remember what's important. Emotional arguments can be expected. EUGENIA LAST
